Key facts!

After World War II, Britain needed help rebuilding, so they asked people from their former colonies, like those in the Caribbean, to come and work.

One of the first ships that brought people from the Caribbean to Britain was called the HMT Empire Windrush, which is how the people on that ship became known as the Windrush generation.

June 22nd is Windrush Day, which celebrates the arrival of the Windrush generation's and their contributions to Britain.
