The Village of Hartington

- Hartington is situated in Derbyshire in the Peak District National Park, about an hour away from school.
- Hartington is a small village, which can be very busy with tourists especially at weekends. It has souvenir shops and tea-rooms. However, it is also the focal point for the northern end of the limestone dales on the river Dove, and there is an excellent network of footpaths centred around the village.

Hartington Hall

- Hartington Hall, Youth Hostel, is a beautiful Tudor manor house built by Robert Bateman in 1611 and Bonnie Prince Charles is thought to have stayed there in 1745.
- It is one of the most popular youth hostels in Derbyshire, with thousands of guests every year. The hostel is passionate about the meals they produce, and all their food is prepared using fresh, seasonal ingredients.

Bedrooms

The bedrooms at Hartington usually sleep between 4 and 8 children, with some bunk beds and some single storey beds.
