

Rode Hall Silver Band

at Astbury May Day

A LEGACY BEGINNING IN 1837

For many in the village, May Day begins with the bright sound of brass echoing through the lanes. This year's procession not only marks another joyful crowning ceremony, but also celebrates the long-standing connection between Astbury and Rode Hall Silver Band.

Formed in 1837 – the year Queen Victoria took the throne – the band began as a Drum and Fife group, leading parishioners from Scholar Green to services at Astbury Church. Nearly 190 years on, that tradition of leading the community to the heart of the village lives on.

LEADING THE WAY FOR GENERATIONS

Rode Hall Silver Band has been part of the Astbury May Day tradition for many years, proudly leading the procession and adding the unmistakable sound of brass to the celebrations. It remains a highlight of our calendar and a tradition we're honoured to continue.

BEYOND MAY DAY

The band performs throughout the year at concerts, festivals, and community events across South Cheshire and beyond. With a busy programme ahead and our 190th anniversary on the horizon, we're excited to share even more music with audiences old and new and would love to see you at an event again in the future.
