Elizabeth I (1533-1603) was the Queen of England and Ireland from 17th November 1558 until her death on 24th March 1603.

She is one of the most famous queens that Britain has ever had. She was the youngest daughter of Henry VIII. Her mother was Anne Boleyn.

The time at which Elizabeth reigned is called the Elizabethan era.

The 44 years that she ruled for are also known as the golden age, because England was a rich and powerful country, which did very well in lots of areas. In a time in which men doubted that a woman could lead the country, Elizabeth proved them wrong.

What was a Workhouse?

A workhouse was a huge building built for very poor people to live and work. They were poor for a number of reasons: ill health, old age, single or purely because they couldn't find work.

Able-bodied, unemployed people had no choice but to enter a workhouse. The alternative was prison!
