We are learning how to respond to new people online

What makes a good friend?

Why don't we always get on with everyone?

Activity 1

What is a new person?

Where do they come from?

How are new people different from friends?

Why do we need to think carefully about interacting with new people online?

What is an 'identity'?

How do we recognise people in real life?

How and why might we change our online 'identity'?

How could Taff make a decision?

What does Taff need to consider?

How well does Taff really know that person?

Activity 2

I could accept them

I could ignore them

I could ask a trusted adult

What is the difference between 'knowing' someone online and in real life?

What else could I do if I'm not sure who the new person really is?

Activity 3

Why might Taff be tempted to accept someone he doesn't know as a friend?

What could have happened to Taff if he became friends with someone who he didn't really know and he hadn't asked an adult about?

Something's not right if...

- the new person is rude to me
- they ask me to do something that makes me feel uncomfortable
- they want to know too much about me
