

Sticky facts to know and remember

- Italy is a country in the continent Europe.
- Rome is the capital city of Italy.
- Climate: predominantly Mediterranean; Alpine in far north; hot, dry in south
- Volcanoes erupt when magma and gas pressure build up inside the Earth, causing them to explode.
- Famous volcanoes in Italy include Etna, Stromboli and Vesuvius.
- Vesuvius buried the city of Pompeii in 79AD.
- Volcanoes can be tourist attractions.
- Italy is one hour ahead of the UK because of imaginary lines which create time zones.

Tourism

Climate

Vocabulary

Mediterranean

Rome

Magma

Lava

Climate

Temperature

Italy

Eruption

Dormant

Vesuvius

Volcano

Sticky facts to know and remember

- The water cycle is the continuous movement of water
- It follows a cycle of evaporation, condensation, precipitation, and collection.
- Water that falls as rain either soaks into the ground or flows into streams and rivers, eventually reaching the sea.
- A river is a moving body of water that flows downhill from its source (start) to its mouth (where it enters the sea). Rivers support wildlife, people, and transport.
- A stream is a small river, and a tributary is a stream or river that joins another river.
- The River Mersey is about 70 miles long.
- The source of the River Mersey is in Stockport, and its mouth is in Liverpool Bay.
- The River Mersey flows through Greater Manchester, Cheshire, and Merseyside.
- The River Nile is the longest river in the world and flows into the Mediterranean Sea.
- The Liverpool Docks are a tourist attraction along the River Mersey and important for trade links; cruise ships often stop there.
- The Albert Dock in Liverpool is a tourist attraction and used for trade.

Travel

Weather

Brilliant Books

Key Vocabulary

River

Estuary

Source

Transport

Tributary

Stream

Tourism

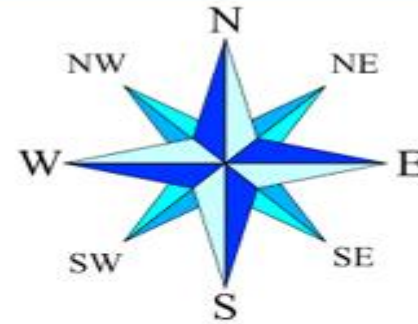

Tourists

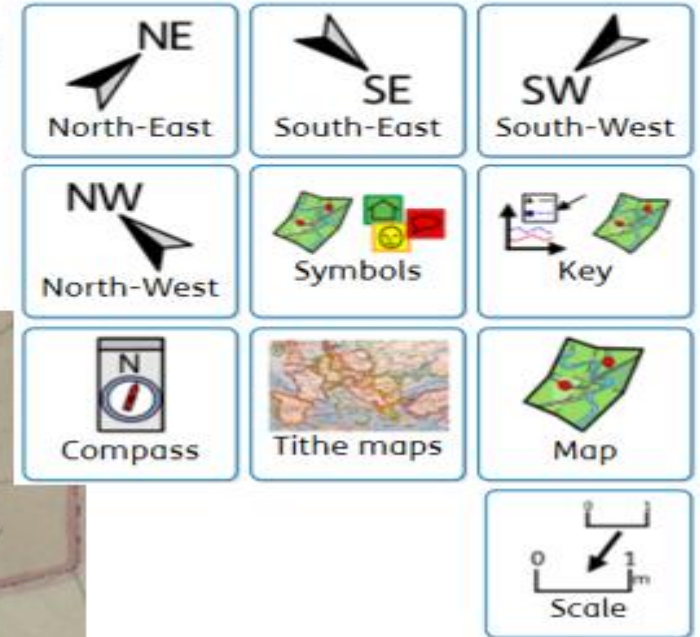

Mouth

Compass

Tourist attraction

Transport Links

Eastham lock