

Sticky Facts

Ramadan is a holy month of fasting from sunrise to sunset.

Eid is a festival; it marks the end of Ramadan and fasting. It is a time of parties, presents and large feasts.

The festival teaches many things that are important to Muslims: worshipping Allah, family, belonging to a community, caring for others.

Muslims have strict rules of what they can and cannot eat and they should not drink alcohol.

Within Islam, the family is at the heart of the Muslim community.

The mother is at the heart of the Muslim family and responsible for teaching the children about halal and haram in the home

The father is responsible for taking the boys to the mosque.

Halal refers to food which is allowed to be eaten by Islamic law because animals have been killed in a specific way.
