We can not wait to see some amazing home learning!

We have been learning all about the Great fire of London in History. The king at the time had a monument built to remember the catastrophic event. It would be great if the children could build on the knowledge they have already gained and do some further research on the monument that is situated on Pudding lane. Think about what it looks like and then create one similar or they can create a model of the burning buildings. This can be designed in any way you see fit, ranging from a detailed drawing to 3d crafting. You can use recyclable materials for your project and your monuments can be made using junk modelling. Don't forget to be as creative as you can! I cannot wait to see the masterpieces you produce.
